

David Lockwood, Uneasy Dreams: Affinities between Franz Kafka and British and Irish Writers

INTRODUCTION

PART I: Kafka: FORM AND THEME

Chapter One: Interpreting Kafka

Chapter Two: Kafka: Form, Style and Structure

Chapter Three: Kafka: Theme and Motif

PART II: KAFKA IN ENGLAND FROM THE 1930s TO THE 1960s

Chapter Four: Kafka and Political Writers of the 1930s and 1940s: Edward Upward, Graham Greene, Ruthven Todd and Christopher Caudwell

Chapter Five: Rex Warner's 'Anti-Fascist Fairy Tales'

Chapter Six: Other Writers from the 1930s to the 1960s: principally Henry Green and William Sansom

Chapter Seven: Anna Kavan

PART III: KAFKA IN IRELAND

Chapter Eight: Samuel Beckett

Chapter Nine: Flann O'Brien and John Banville

PART IV: KAFKA IN SCOTLAND

Chapter Ten: Alasdair Gray and Iain Banks

Chapter Eleven: James Kelman

PART V: KAFKA IN BRITAIN FROM THE 1960s TO THE PRESENT

Chapter Twelve: Kazuo Ishiguro

Chapter Thirteen: W. G. Sebald

Chapter Fourteen: 'New Wave' Science Fiction and the 'New Weird': J. G. Ballard and China Miéville

Chapter Fifteen: Diverse Writers 1960-2025, including Iris Murdoch, John Fowles, David Wheldon, William Golding, Ali Smith and Ian McEwan

Bibliography and Index